Flocabulary

Adverbs - Lyrics

"Adverbs Are Preferred"

An adverb modifies a verb,

Adjective or even another adverb.

This is how it works, yep, haven't you heard?

Adverbs are preferred when it comes to writing words.

Listen: (x2)

This is a story of my homegirl, Tory,

She had a lot of homework and thought it was boring.

She had a paper due that was about ten pages,

And she needed the words to make it outrageous.

Adverbs: words to describe

The verbs and the adjectives that she was gonna write.

So she skillfully wrote,

While she silently thought,

And instantly, she was off to a good start.

But then she got stuck trying to talk about a place,

Adverbs gave her a taste of literary grace.

She could talk about anywhere: right here,

over there, inside out or upstairs.

She was elated from what she created.

Was it because the words that she just integrated?

Since adverbs can be about purpose,

They intentionally brought her point to the surface.

An adverb modifies a verb,

Adjective or even another adverb.

This is how it works, yep, haven't you heard?

Adverbs are preferred when it comes to writing words.

Listen: (x2)

Usually homework could get tough,

But Tory was in the zone and she couldn't get enough.

Seldom did she get into her work like this,

But she had a lot of adverbs in her bag of tricks.

She could talk about how often something went down,

Or describe when, like later or right now.

She was finally happy with what she had prepared,

With a smile on her face from here to there.

And her head held high, she could tell why.

You can take plenty of words, and add an -ly,

And automatically you can have an adverb,

One of the best writing tips that she had heard.

So next time when you're feeling kind of trapped,

You've hit writer's block and you're about to snap,

You should take a tip from Tory, my home girl.

She could help you write the best paper in the whole world.

An adverb modifies a verb,

Adjective or even another adverb.

This is how it works, yep, haven't you heard?

Adverbs are preferred when it comes to writing words.

Listen: (x2)